

Module Three

Task: Composition and cropping

What do we think about when composing a picture? What makes a powerful illustration? Find examples in picture books that you think make a strong composition. You might like to share these in the Facebook group.

Now for your drawing task. We're going to try cropping your scene. Cropping is a fun way to change the feel of your illustrations.

Taking three ordinary objects and cropping them inside your field of view creates an immediate and powerful statement in your sketch.

Follow my video, which will guide you through the cropping process. Keep using your greyscale to help you keep on track with your value contrast.
